Using this Handbook

This handbook is not intended to be like other textbooks. There are no paragraphs, no walls of text; there is directly stated information for you to use to succeed in your courses. Here we will show you the way we present information in this handbook.

QUICK LIST:

- These quick lists are spread throughout the handbook. They are designed to give you only the information you need and to do so quickly. You can read these lists to find out the basic requirements in each section.

The Do’s & Do not’s boxes are used to give you a brief idea of where students succeed and where students often make mistakes. Use these as a reference when working with a section.

About the Authors:

Sean F. Munro, Assistant Professor of English at Delgado Community College, teaches composition, literature, and creative writing. He received an M.F.A. from The University of Arizona and a B.A. from The University of New Orleans, has had poems published in a few journals, and is finishing his first book of poems.

Monica Mankin, Assistant Professor of English at Delgado Community College, teaches literature and composition. She earned her M.F.A. from the University of Idaho, Moscow, and her B.A. from the University of California, Riverside. She is a poet and Poetry Editor for The Turnip Truck(s) interdisciplinary and literary magazine.

Feedback:

If you have any feedback about this handbook, please email Sean Munro (smunro@dcc.edu) or Monica Mankin (mmanki@dcc.edu). We created this handbook and we will continue to revise it to make it more engaging and informative for you. Let us know if you feel like something is missing, if you find a typo, if you found a section confusing, or if you see something unnecessary. We appreciate and welcome any and all feedback.
Printing Resources on Campus

We designed this handbook to be printed cheaply on campus or off campus. Feel free to print the whole thing or just the sections you need. You can also share this handbook with anyone. It is an open educational resource, which means it is free.

- To save printing cost, you can print this handbook “2 pages per sheet.”
- To save even more cost, you can print on both sides of the page.
- Black & white printing is recommended because it is cheaper, but be aware that some of the screenshots may wash out a little.
- Below is list of places students can print on some of Delgado’s campuses:
  - Students will need a Student ID to print at most of these locations. At Delgado’s City Park Campus, students can receive a student ID in the annex to Building 1, Room 127W3

---

| All Delgado Library locations have high-quality/high-speed pay to print stations. Ask at the Circulation Desk of any campus or site library about printing services. |

Communicating with Instructors

Read all course syllabi carefully to learn your instructors’ policies about communication. Below are a few guidelines for maintaining professionalism between you and your instructors.

Email

- Use your Delgado email account for all college-related communication.
- Use a standard size and style font. Do not use all capital letters.
- Include a greeting.
- Identify yourself and the course that you are taking with the instructor.
- State the purpose of your email.
- Respect your instructor’s stated response time. Most instructors ask for at least 24 hours.

Office Hours

- Instructors are required to be available in their offices outside of class for ten hours a week.
- Instructors provide their office locations and hours on their course syllabi.
- An instructor’s teaching load and schedule will determine his or her office hours. Sometimes an instructor’s availability will not correspond with your own availability to meet. Email or speak to your instructor after class about making an appointment.

Office Telephone

- Instructors provide their office phone numbers on their syllabi.
- The best time to call an instructor at this number is during his or her office hours.
- If the instructor is not available by telephone when you call, leave a message that includes your name, the course you are taking with the instructor, the purpose of your call, and phone number.
- Keep in mind that the instructor may not be able to return your call until then next day during his or her office hours.

Tone

- Maintain a professional tone with your instructor at all times.
- Refer to Delgado’s Grievance Policy in the event that your instructor breaches professionalism.

Do’s

- Do use your Delgado email account to correspond with your instructors.
- Do identify who you are and which class you are taking with the instructor.
- Do use a standard size and style font when you compose your email.
- Do respect the instructor’s stated response time for email and phone messages.

Do not’s

- Do not use an unprofessional email address, such as hotbootie69@gmail.com
- Do not use all capital letters when you email an instructor.
- Do not expect your instructor to be available outside his or her office hours unless you have made an appointment.
- Do not use a disrespectful tone with instructors. Even if you are frustrated, maintain your professionalism. We’re all human beings.
Saving and Submitting Documents

This section will explain the basics of saving and submitting documents. Keeping track of your drafts, essays, assignments, and various files is important to your success as a student. Click the underlined text for a link to instructions for these services.

Where to Save Documents

- Never save documents on a public computer.
  - Every Delgado computer you use on campus is considered a public computer. You will likely never find the file again.
- Buy a USB drive.
  - You can use these on any computer on campus and save your files to it. Having a USB drive will make your life easier.
  - USB drives are relatively cheap. Go for it.
- Email documents to yourself as an attachment.
  - Do this if you do not have a USB drive or if you forgot it at home.
  - You can access your email from any computer campus and probably at home.
  - This option is free.
- Use Google Drive.
  - This is also free if you sign up for Google.
  - It is an online USB drive you can access from anywhere.

Submitting Documents & Assignments to Canvas

- How do I submit an online assignment?
- How do I upload a file as an assignment submission in Canvas?
- How do I upload a file from Google Drive as an assignment submission in Canvas?
- How do I upload a file from Microsoft Office 365 as an assignment submission?
- How do I know when my assignment has been submitted?
- How do I know when my instructor has graded my assignment?
- How do I communicate with my instructor about assignments?
- How do I view assignment comments from my instructor?
- How do I use DocViewer in Canvas assignments as a student?
- How do I view annotation feedback comments from my instructor directly in my assignment submission?
- How do I view rubric results for my assignment?
There will also be sections like this with screenshots. This is to help you navigate the variety of word processing software available. Researching Outside Sources

This section will help you evaluate, find, and manage outside sources while researching a topic for an essay. Please use the hyperlinks in the Commonly Used Database section. They will take you directly to those databases.

- Researching outside sources can be a confusing and time-consuming process. The advice here will help you navigate the research process.
- As always, remember to ask a librarian for research help if you are stuck. They are masters of library and information science and can do magical things with the databases.

Evaluating Sources

Credibility & Relevance

- To evaluate a source’s credibility & relevance:
  - Look at the authors’ or organizations’ qualifications and reputations.
  - Determine whether the source’s content is fact, opinion, or propaganda.
  - Crosscheck facts for accuracy.
  - Determine whether the author’s opinion is supported with sound reasoning and evidence.
  - Question the evidence presented in the source.
  - Look for a list of references or citations that document the evidence.
  - Consider the timeliness of the source. Information becomes dated as new research becomes available, so carefully think about using sources that are older than ten years.

Popular vs. Scholarly Sources

Finding Sources

Commonly Used Databases

The following databases provide articles and various media:

- Academic Search Complete: provides newspaper & scholarly journal articles
- CQ Researcher: reports on current issues with lots of listed sources
- Global Issues in Context: focuses on broad issues
- Issues & Controversies: reports (pro/con) on current issues
- Opposing Viewpoints in Context: provides various media on current issues
- SIRS Knowledge Source: provides various media (articles, graphs) on current issues
- Nexis Uni: provides newspaper articles & other news sources
- Gale Virtual Reference Library: provides encyclopedias, almanacs, and reference sources

*These links are through Delgado's Library. If you are off campus, you will have to log in to access them. Click here for instructions on how to access these databases off campus. If you are on campus, you will be taken directly to the databases.

* Please also visit the library research guide for English: Click Here.

How to Use a Search Engine

Most databases offer similar search options. To conduct a fruitful search:

- Determine what you need to know. Develop a few open-ended questions to guide you. Research is a discovery process, so keep an open mind as you search.
- Choose several keywords related to your topic. Databases will not accept questions or complete sentences, like Google, so create a list of words significant to your topic.
- Use various combinations of your keywords. If the initial results of the search are too broad or too narrow, try again using a different combination of keywords.
- Use the search engine tools to help narrow your results. Most search engines will allow you to select the type of source, the date range of publication, and the source format (such as online PDF or old school library book).
- Read source abstracts to determine if a source is worth further review. Abstracts provide summaries of a source’s main idea and purpose.

Do’s

- Do use a variety of databases.
- Do use a variety of and combinations of keywords. Use a thesaurus if you have to. Bad search results are usually caused by searching for bad keywords.
- Do narrow your search to the types of sources you want to review.
- Do read the abstract, which is a summary of the source, to see if the source is relevant. If it is relevant, read the source.

Do not’s

- Do not choose databases randomly.
- Do not focus on just one database.
- Do not enter an entire sentence or question into the search engine field.
- Do not cite from abstracts provided in the databases.
- Do not forget that librarians will happily help you navigate these databases if you are stuck.
- Do not plagiarize any of the abstracts, sources, or ideas in the sources you find.
Managing Sources

Keeping Track of Sources

- Use database tools to email, download, or print the sources that you intend to cite. You can select to include the complete Works Cited entry and a PDF of the entire source when you email the source to yourself.
- Use index cards or a word processing program to compile source information. Here’s what to include on a source card:
  - Title. Author. Publisher. Place of Publication. Volume. Page Numbers. Date Published.
  - Relevant quotation with its page number (if applicable).
  - Your paraphrase of the quotation.
  - A comment or reflection on the meaning and relevance of the quotation.

Taking Notes

- Maintain organization. Whether you use index cards, a notebook, or a computer, keep all notes stored together in one place for easy access.
- Record information as it pertains to your research questions and thesis. Always use quotations to mark direct quotes from a source.
- Note the author’s qualifications and affiliations. This will help you create meaningful signal phrases as you integrate source information into your paper.
- Record page numbers. Not all sources will have page numbers, but for those that do be sure to include page numbers in your notes so that you do not have to hunt for that information later.
- Respond to the quotations that you choose. Why is this information relevant? Will it need to be quoted directly, or can it be summarized and paraphrased?
- Reflect on your notes. Identify subtopics and connections between sources to help you outline the organizational structure of your research paper.
- Discard any quotations or sources that no longer seem relevant to your topic after your research process is complete.

Do’s

- Do select only the most relevant quotations.
- Do always use quotation marks around direct quotes from a source.
- Do think about how you will balance your words and ideas with those of the sources.
- Do keep track of page numbers and authors.
- Do reflect on your notes in terms of how they will help you organize your paper.

Do not’s

- Do not write down everything from a source.
- Do not overlook page numbers and author affiliations.
- Do not choose too many quotations.
- Do not blow off research days in the computer lab that your instructor may assign.
- Do not wait until the last minute to do research. This is when the temptation to plagiarize arises.
This section will show you detailed examples of how to integrate, document, and cite your outside sources in MLA style. Please do not skip the brief section that describes what plagiarism is.

- Use the power of visual comparison. If your citation does not look like the example, try again, or ask an instructor or tutor for help.
- Follow the highlighted text. In each example, there is an in-text citation with a corresponding works cited entry. The yellow highlighted portion is how the in-text citation and the works cited entry are connected.
- Note: The examples in this section are in MLA style. To see examples in APA style, please visit Ch. 7: APA Style Citing & Documenting Sources & the APA style sample essay at the end of Ch. 2.

What Is Plagiarism?

As defined in Delgado Community College’s Student Judicial Code (Policy No. SA-1448.1D), plagiarism is this:

Plagiarism-- The inclusion of someone else's actual words or paraphrases, ideas, or data into one's own work without acknowledging the original source. The included material must have appropriate citations such as [in-text citations] or quotation marks and identification of the sources, published or unpublished, copyrighted or not copyrighted.

Is It Plagiarism?

Questions you might be considering:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Question</th>
<th>Answer</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>If the student unintentionally copies another's work, is this plagiarism?</td>
<td>Yes, this is the first excuse everyone uses: “I didn’t mean to do it.” Your writing is your responsibility</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>If the student only lists the source on the works cited page, is this plagiarism?</td>
<td>Yes, an in-text citation that corresponds to an entry on the works cited page is required. Otherwise, the reader has no idea where you used the source in your essay.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>If the instructor never states that students have to cite their sources and a student copies a source, is this plagiarism?</td>
<td>Yes, you are responsible for your own writing. This includes not being academically dishonest.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>If a student uses exact words and phrases from a source and adds a citation but does not include quotation marks, is this plagiarism?</td>
<td>Yes, if the language is not enclosed in quotation marks, this means you are stating the language is your own, which in this case, it would not be.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>If a student puts a source's idea into her own words but does not cite it, is this plagiarism?</td>
<td>Yes, paraphrase and summary, which are other’s ideas in your own words, require citation.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>If a student submits an old paper she used in another course without the instructor's permission, is this plagiarism?</td>
<td>Yes, to avoid this, speak with your instructor. She may allow you to re-use an essay. She may not. Communication is important.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>If a student hires someone to write the paper for her or gets her friend to write the paper, is this plagiarism?</td>
<td>Yes, it is wise to have a tutor, a friend, a family member, a senator, or even an old teacher help you revise your essay. However, asking someone else to write sections of it or the whole thing is academic dishonesty, a.k.a cheating.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>If a student fails to cite (that is, properly credit) words or ideas borrowed from another writer, is this plagiarism?</td>
<td>Yes, this is precisely the point of all these questions. If you do not provide a citation or if that citation is fake or incorrect, this is plagiarism. Keep track of your sources and citations.</td>
</tr>

Integrating Sources

Knowing how to integrate outside sources into your own writing is extremely important. Being able to integrate sources effectively helps you:

- Reinforce your ideas with the credibility or reputation of a source.
- Identify others’ opinions, theories, and personal explanations.
- Present opinions that are open to dispute.
- Present facts and statistics.
- Establish ethos as a reliable researcher.
- Engage readers by showing them where to find information on your topic.

There are three ways to integrate sources into an essay – summarizing, paraphrasing, and direct quotation:

SUMMARY: A brief objective report, in your own words, of the main idea of a source or a section of a source. Your summary will be more general, less specific, than the source. Summaries are meant to reduce a larger amount of information.

PARAPHRASE: Paraphrase is a rephrasing, rewording, or restatement of an excerpt from a source. Paraphrases are written in your own words. Simply, you are translating sentences from English to English, but now the paraphrase is in your own words instead of the sources.

DIRECT QUOTATION: When you use any exact words or phrases from a source, direct quotation is needed. It does not matter how little – one word – or how much – an entire paragraph. Direct quotations should be used sparingly. Good writers mostly paraphrase and summarize.

INTEGRATION COMBINATIONS: Summary, paraphrase, and direct quotations can be combined. You could paraphrase half of a sentence and quote the other half. You could summarize a paragraph and quote a vivid phrase from that paragraph.

Please click the above bold words for a more detailed explanation of each, along with examples.
Summary

A brief objective report, in your own words, of the main idea of a source or a section of a source. Your summary will be more general, less specific, than the source. Summaries are meant to reduce a larger amount of information.

QUICK LIST:

- Write your summary in your own words
- The summary should be more brief and more general than the source
- Reduce the source. Make it more concise.
- Each summary requires an in-text citation that corresponds to an entry on your works cited page.
- Read the source more than once and be sure you completely understand the main idea before writing your summary.
- Why summarize? Some people – like some sources – are long-winded and detailed. Use summary when you need to get right to a source’s main idea.

Do’s

- Do write the entire summary in your own words.
- Do write your summary more briefly than the original. If the source is a paragraph, your summary should be a sentence.
- Do provide an in-text citation that corresponds to the works cited page at the end of your summary.
- Do take your time to summarize. Write out a first draft of the summary. Let it sit. Then write another draft of the first summary. Let it simmer like good red beans.

Do not’s

- Do not copy any exact words and phrases from the source.
- Do not write a summary that is as long as the source you are trying to summarize.
- Do not forget to cite the summary you have written in your own words, but not your own ideas.
- Do not misinterpret the source.
- Do not include your own opinion or ideas in the summary. Save that for after your summary.

<td>“The Osiris-Rex spacecraft is happy and healthy,” said Richard Kuhns, the program manager at Lockheed Martin, which built the spacecraft. A year from now, Osiris-Rex will swing back around and make a close flyby of Earth, using the planet’s gravity to tilt the angle of its orbit to match that of Bennu, a carbon-rich asteroid that is 1,600 feet in diameter and has an orbit around the sun similar to Earth’s. It is about as wide as the Empire State Building is tall. Osiris-Rex — a shortening of Origins, Spectral Interpretation, Resource Identification, Security, Regolith Explorer — will catch up to Bennu in 2018, entering orbit for more than a year of observation to allow scientists to figure out where they want to scoop their sample. The spacecraft will then swoop in and touch Bennu’s surface for a few seconds, using a burst of nitrogen to kick up pebbles and dirt. Osiris-Rex is to leave Bennu in 2021 and drop off the asteroid samples in 2023.</td>

replace Obamacare, consuming Congress and providing a rallying cry for the 2016 election cycle. The “Health Care and Education Reconciliation Act” of January 19, 2011 would have repealed all of the Affordable Care Act (“The Fix,” 2014). It passed in the House of Representatives 245 to 189 with three Democrats voting for it, but was never considered by the Senate. Why such persistence and vitriol?

We believe that the key to understanding why Obamacare is both so hated and beyond rational discussion, is the effort on the part of many white Americans, both politicians and non-politicians, to rid the U.S. of President Barack Obama’s legislative legacy. Obamacare is one of the most visible symbols of Obama’s presidency (Frontline, 2017; Daily Kos, 2013). It is often referred to as his “signature legislation.” This intense, long sustained effort to repeal Obamacare contains, we argue here, the perhaps unconscious but also often denied, quest to eradicate blackness from the White House and from the government. Many whites, who often live in mostly white communities, wish to erase not only the presence but also the memory of the very existence of an African American President of the United States (Coates, 2017; Walsh, 2011).

Kenneth Walsh (2011) writes that President Obama reflected in 2010 that race was still a problem. In May 2010, he told guests at a private White House dinner that race was probably a key component in the rising opposition to his presidency from conservatives, especially rightwing activists in the anti-incumbent “Tea Party” movement that was then surging across the country. Many middle-class and working-class whites felt aggrieved and resentful that the federal government was helping other groups, including bankers, automakers, irresponsible people who had defaulted on their mortgages, and the poor, but wasn’t helping them nearly enough, he said.
Paraphrase

Paraphrase is a rephrasing, rewording, or restatement of an excerpt from a source. Paraphrases are written in your own words. Simply, you are translating sentences from English to English, but now the paraphrase is in your own words instead of the sources.

QUICK LIST:
- Write your paraphrase in your own words
- The paraphrase should be about the same length as the excerpt from the source. Think of it as a 1-1 substitution.
- Each paraphrase requires an in-text citation that corresponds to an entry on your works cited page.
- Read the source more than once and be sure you completely understand the main idea before writing your paraphrase.
- Why paraphrase? When the excerpt from the source has important information that may not be expressed in a way your audience can easily understand, paraphrase. You are translating an excerpt from the source so that your audience for your essay can understand the excerpt.

Do’s
- Do write the entire paraphrase in your own words.
- Do make your paraphrase a similar length as the excerpt from the source. If the excerpt from the source is three sentences, your paraphrase should be three sentences.
- Do provide an in-text citation that corresponds to the works cited page at the end of your paraphrase.
- Do use a thesaurus when paraphrasing. Write out a first draft. Let it sit. Then write another draft. Let it simmer like good red beans.

Do not’s
- Do not copy any exact words and phrases from the source.
- Do not write a paraphrase that is much shorter than the excerpt from the source. That would be a summary.
- Do not forget to cite the paraphrase you have written in your own words, but not your own ideas.
- Do not misinterpret the excerpt from the source.
- Do not include your own opinion or ideas in the paraphrase. Save that for after your paraphrase.

Direct Quotation

When you use any exact words or phrases from a source, direct quotation is needed. It does not matter how little – one word – or how much – an entire paragraph. Direct quotations should be used sparingly. Good writers mostly paraphrase and summarize.

REQUIREMENTS:

1. Have a reason to use a direct quotation. Otherwise, paraphrase or summarize. Here are four reasons to use a direct quotation.
   - The language of the source is so clear and concise that it cannot be summarized or paraphrased. This is rare.
   - The language of the source is vivid, striking, shocking, absurd, etc. This is more common.
   - The language of the source is representative of something you are explaining or presents a fact. This depends on audience and context.
   - The language of the source represents the opposition or an uncommon position. In other words, you will have to prove to your audience that you did not make it up.

2. Attach the direct quotation to a signal phrase or incorporate the quotation into your own sentence, your own words. Try to establish the credibility of the source in the signal phrase. Here are reporting verbs to signal that you are using a quotation:
   - writes, says, states, observes, suggests, remarks, laments, protests, charges, replies, admits, claims, acknowledges, addresses, adds, advises, agrees, analyzes, announces, answers, argues, asks, asserts, believes, cautions, clarifies, compares, complains, concedes, concludes, concurs, confirms, considers, contends, contests, continues, criticizes, critiques, declares, demonstrates, describes, determines, disagrees, discusses, disputes, elaborates, emphasizes, examines, explains, expresses, finds, grants, identifies, illustrates, implies, indicates, insists, interprets, introduces, maintains, mentions, notes, objects, offers, opposes, points out, posits, postulates, presents, proposes, raises, refutes, rejects, reports, responds, reveals, shows, specifies, thinks, translates
   - In MLA Style the reporting verb should be in present tense.
   - In APA Style the reporting verb should be in past tense or present perfect tense.

3. Always provide an analysis of the direct quotation.

4. Direct quotations should supply evidence to your argument. Do not use quotations that repeat your claims. This is called a parrot quote.

5. Each direct quotation requires an in-text citation that corresponds to an entry on your works cited page. This can be in the signal phrase or in the parentheses at the end of the sentence.

- Do always follow rules 1 through 5 when using a direct quotation.
- Do use this section from the handbook while integrating direct quotations into your essay.
- Do vary your reporting verbs. The same thing over and over again is boring.

- Do not ignore these rules. They are here to help.
- Do not use the website as an in-text citation.
- Do not forget to close your quotation marks.
- Do not alter the meaning of the original text to suit your own agenda.
Examples of Short Quotations

- If your quotations are less than four lines long across the formatted, typed page, which is usually the case, place them in your text and enclose them with quotation marks.
- In-text citations can come either in the signal phrase or in the in-text parenthetical citation at the end of the sentence, never both.
- Please visit the Examples of In-text Citations & Corresponding Works Cited Entries page for more examples. Here are three ways to incorporate direct quotations into your own sentence:

Block Quotations

- If a direct quotation is more than four lines long on a typed page that is in MLA style, it is required to be a block quote.
- Introduce the quotation with a complete sentence and a colon.
- Indent the entire quote 1-inch (hit the TAB key twice), double space the lines, and do not use quotation marks.
- Do not indent the opening line unless the quote begins a new paragraph.
- The in-text citation can be included at the end, outside of the final punctuation, or in the signal phrase.
- You should not begin a new paragraph after a block quote because of direct quotation rule #3: Always provide an analysis of the direct quotation.

Block Quotation Example

As defined in Delgado Community College’s “Student Judicial Code (Rights, Responsibilities, and Disciplinary Procedures” (Policy No. SA-1448.1D), plagiarism is this:

Plagiarism-- The inclusion of someone else's actual words or paraphrases, ideas, or data into one's own work without acknowledging the original source. The included material must have appropriate citations such as [in-text citations] or quotation marks and identification of the sources, published or unpublished, copyrighted or not copyrighted.

This is a correctly formatted block quotation. After your block quotation, your paragraph should continue while you explain and analyze the large block quotation you just presented. Here is where you explain and analyze the long block quotation’s significance to the claim you are making in that paragraph. Most times, a block quotation will not end a paragraph because of requirement #3: “always provide an analysis.” The quote will not speak for itself. It is your job to explain it.

Editing Quotations

Quotations within Quotations

- Sometimes you will need to quote text that is already in quotation marks.
- When you quote the text already in quotation marks, change the original “quotation marks” to ‘single quotation marks.’

Original Text from Source:
And then say what? Say, “Forget you’re hungry. Forget you go shot inna back by some racist cop – Chuck was here? Chuck come up to Harlem.”

Single Quotation Marks within a Quote:
Wolfe begins his book: “And then say what? Say, ‘Forget you’re hungry. Forget you go shot inna back by some racist cop – Chuck was here? Chuck come up to Harlem.’”

Integration Combinations

Summary, paraphrase, and direct quotations can be combined. You could paraphrase half of a sentence and quote the other half. You could summarize a paragraph and quote a vivid phrase from that paragraph.

Do’s
- Do experiment with the variety of ways to integrate sources.
- Do ask questions of your instructor or tutor if something seems different or off.
- Do feel free to mimic some of the examples below.
- Do use the other sections in this chapter to summarize, paraphrase, or quote properly.

Do not’s
- Do not create two in-text citations if you use two integration techniques in one sentence.
- Do not forget to put quotation marks around exact words and phrases from the original source, especially when mixing paraphrase and direct quotation.
- Do not ignore the rules about summary, paraphrase, and quotations in the other sections.

Examples of Combinations

| Combining Direct Quotation & Paraphrase: |
| Original Text from Source: |
| West, in his own way, will likely pay also for his thin definition of freedom, as opposed to one that experiences history, traditions, and struggle not as a burden, but as an anchor in a chaotic world. |
| Combo: |
| It is clear that there will be some retribution for West’s actions and attitude toward his “definition of freedom” (Coates). |

| Combining Direct Quotation & Summary: |
| Original Text from Source: |
| West’s thoughts are not original—the apocryphal Harriet Tubman quote and the notion that slavery was a “choice” echoes the ancient trope that slavery wasn’t that bad; the myth that blacks do not protest crime in their community is pure Giulianiism; and West’s desire to “go to Charlottesville and talk to people on both sides” is an extension of Trump’s response to the catastrophe. These are not stray thoughts. They are the propaganda that justifies voter suppression, and feeds police brutality, and minimizes the murder of Heather Heyer. |
| Combo: |
| Coates notices that the conservative propaganda the Kanye west spouts on Twitter is the same that “justifies voter suppression, and feeds police brutality, and minimizes the murder of Heather Heyer.” |

The Page

In general, this is how each page should appear: each margin, all four edges of the page, should be 1 inch, double-space everything, and use Times New Roman 12pt font for everything in the document.

QUICK LIST:
- Make all four margins 1 inch.
- Double-space the entire document.
- Use Times New Roman (type) 12 pt (size) font.

Do’s
- Do set all margins to one inch each.
- Do choose MLA Style from a template if possible.
- Do set the document to double-space before you begin writing.
- Do set the font to Times New Roman 12pt before you begin writing. Often, it is set to a different font & size.

Do not’s
- Do not assume these settings are correct when you open a new document.
- Do not press ENTER at the end of every line to double-space your document. It will ruin your life.
- Do not choose another font or size when turning in a draft. Your instructor does not want to go blind reading an odd font.

Microsoft Word

Google Docs
The header appears in the top right corner of every page.

QUICK LIST:
- Include only your last name and the page number.
- This should be placed in the header of the document, not the first line of each page.
- Use the program’s page number function, so it changes automatically.

Do’s
- Do use only your last name.
- Do use the page number function of the word processing program. Examples are below.
- Do only put one space between your last name and the page number.

Do not’s
- Do not manually write your last name and page number at the top of every single page.
- Do not write pg., pp., p., or # next to the page number.
- Do not put your instructor’s last name in the header. Use only your last name.
Heading

The heading appears in the top left of only the first page.

QUICK LIST:
- Include all of the following:
  o Your first and last name
  o The instructor’s name
  o The course and section number o The day, month, and year – in that order.
- This is double-spaced just like the rest of the document.

Do’s
- Do double-space the entire heading.
- Do use Ms., Mrs., Mr., Dr., or Professor before the instructor’s last name.
- Do check the course number and section number.
- Do use MLA style date format: 25 June 2018

Do not’s
- Do not misspell your instructor’s name.
- Do not guess the course and section number.
- Do not double-space the heading by using the Enter key.
- Do not label the heading information. Include the specified information as shown below.
Jane Doe ▷ Your full name

Mr. Munro ▷ Your instructor’s name

English 102-1EH ▷ Your course & section number

17 March 2017 ▷ The date in MLA format: day Month year

Titles

You are required to have a title.

QUICK LIST:
- Center the title
- Make it original
- Use standard MLA font & size

Do’s
- Do think of your favorite song title. Is it long? Is it boring? Is it titled “Song #2”? No, no, and no. It is short and snappy like “Stay Woke.”
- Do K.I.S.S. = keep it simple, stupid.
- Do relate the title to the topic of your essay.
- Do imitate titles you like – from any genre.
- Do capitalize the first word, no matter what it is.
- Do capitalize all nouns, pronouns, verbs, adverbs, conjunctions, and adjectives.
- Do write your title in 12pt, Times New Roman font with no bold, italics, underlining, or quotation marks.
- Do center the title by using the centering button.

Do not’s
- Do not write the title of the assignment.
- Do not write your thesis statement as the title.
- Do not write an essay prompt question as the title.
- Do not capitalize prepositions (of, with, before, etc.) or articles (a, an, the), unless they are the first word.
- Do not change the font in any way. The format should be boring. The language you use should be exciting.
- Do not sigh and say, “I suck at titles.” Just write one.
- Do not center the title by using the TAB key.

Examples of Great Titles:
- Stay Woke
- Gag Me with a Spoon
- The New Jim Crow
- Manufacturing Consent
- This Is America
- A Confederacy of Dunces
- Notes of a Native Son
- The Ways We Lie
- Ain’t I a Woman?

Examples of Garbage Titles:
- Essay #2
- Should Teachers Carry Beers on Campus?
- If I Could Be Any Animal, What Would I Be?
- Research Paper: Negative Effects of Cellphones
- Technological Nightmare

TITLE GORE

WHY AM I YELLING IN THIS TITLE? why have i forgotten how to capitalize?
1. Place the cursor at the beginning of your title.

2. Select this center function to properly center your title.
Paragraphs

Each paragraph should be clearly delineated.

QUICK LIST:

- Indent each paragraph by pressing the TAB key once.
- Paragraphs, as well as the entire essay, should be double-spaced.
- No extra spaces are needed between paragraphs.

Do’s

- Do indent by pressing the TAB key once.
- Do double-space the entire paragraph, using the double-spacing function.
- Do use standard MLA font & size.

Do not’s

- Do not use the space bar to indent the paragraph. Ignore what your high school teacher demanded.
- Do not press ENTER at the end of every line to double-space.
- Do not add extra space between paragraphs. The indentation clearly shows a new paragraph has begun.

Microsoft Word & Google Docs

Press the TAB key once at the beginning of each paragraph.

Notice, there is no extra space between the title and the first paragraph.

Toward a Recovery of Nineteenth Century Farming Handbooks

While researching texts written about nineteenth century farming, I found a few authors who published books about the literature of nineteenth century farming, particularly agricultural journals, newspapers, pamphlets, and brochures. These authors often placed the farming literature they were studying into an historical context by discussing the important events in agriculture of the year in which the literature was published (see Demaree, for example). However, while these authors discuss journals, newspapers, pamphlets, and brochures, I could not find much discussion about another important source of farming knowledge: farming handbooks. My goal in this paper is to bring this source into the agricultural literature discussion by connecting three agricultural handbooks from the nineteenth century with nineteenth century agricultural history.

To achieve this goal, I have organized my paper into four main sections, two of which have sub-sections. In the first section, I provide an account of three important events in nineteenth century agricultural history: population and technological changes, the distribution of scientific new knowledge, and farming’s influence on education. In the second section, I discuss three nineteenth century farming handbooks in connection with the important events described in the first section. I end my paper... with a third section that offers research questions that could be answered in future versions of this paper and conclude with a fourth section that discusses the importance of expanding this particular project. I also include an appendix after the Works Cited that contains images of the three handbooks I examined. Before I can begin the examination of the three handbooks, however, I need to provide an historical context in which the books were written, and it is to this that I now turn.

Historical Context

The nineteenth century saw many changes to daily American life with an increase in population, improved methods of transportation, developments in technology, and the rise in the importance of science. These events impacted all aspects of nineteenth century American life (most significantly, those involved in slavery and the Civil War).

However, one part of American life was affected that is quite often taken for granted: the life of the American farmer.

Population and Technological Changes. One of the biggest changes, as seen in nineteenth century America’s census reports, is the dramatic increase in population. The 1820 census reported that over 10 million people were living in America; of those 10 million, over 2 million were engaged in agriculture. Ten years prior to that, the 1810 census reported over 7 million people were living in the states; there was no category for people engaged in agriculture. In this ten-year time span, then, agriculture experienced significant improvements and changes that enhanced its importance in American life.

One of these improvements was the developments of canals and steamboats, which allowed farmers to “sell what has previously been unsalable [sic]” and resulted in a...
“substantial increase in [a farmer’s] ability to earn income” (Danhof 5). This improvement allowed the relations between the rural and urban populations to strengthen, resulting in an increase in trade. The urban population (defined as having over 2,500 inhabitants) in the northern states increased rapidly after 1820. This increase accompanied the decrease in rural populations, as farmers who “preferred trade, transportation, or ‘tinkering’” to the tasks of tending to crops and animals found great opportunities in the city (Danhof 7). Trade and transportation thus began to influence farming life significantly. Before 1820, the rural community accounted for eighty percent of consumption of farmers’ goods (Hurt 127). With the improvements in transportation, twenty-five percent of farmers’ products were sold for commercial gain, and by 1825, farming “became a business rather than a way of life” (128). This business required farmers to specialize their production and caused most farmers to give “less attention to the production of surplus commodities like wheat, tobacco, pork, or beef” (128). The increase in specialization encouraged some farmers to turn to technology to increase their production and capitalize on commercial markets (172).

The technology farmers used around 1820 was developed from three main sources: Europe, coastal Native American tribes in America, and domestic modifications made from the first two sources’ technologies. Through time, technology improved, and while some farmers clung to their time-tested technologies, others were eager to find alternatives to these technologies. These farmers often turned to current developments in Great Britain and received word of their technological improvements through firsthand knowledge by talking with immigrants and travelers. Farmers also began planning and conducting experiments, and although they lacked a truly scientific approach, these farmers engaged in experiments to obtain results and learn from the results.\textsuperscript{2} Agricultural organizations were then formed to “encourage . . . experimentation, hear reports, observe results, and exchange critical comments” (Danhof 53). Thus, new knowledge was transmitted orally from farmer to farmer, immigrant to farmer, and traveler to farmer, which could result in the miscommunication of this new scientific knowledge. Therefore, developments were made for knowledge to be transmitted and recorded in a more permanent, credible way: by print.

The Distribution of New Knowledge. Before 1820 and prior to the new knowledge farmers were creating, farmers who wanted print information about agriculture had their choice of agricultural almanacs and even local newspapers to receive information (Danhof 54). After 1820, however, agricultural writing took more forms than almanacs and newspapers. From 1820 to 1870, agricultural periodicals were responsible for spreading new knowledge among farmers. In his published dissertation \textit{The American Agricultural Press 1819-1860}, Albert Lowther Demaree presents a “description of the general content of [agricultural journals]” (xi). These journals began in 1819 and were written for farmers, with topics devoted to “farming, stock raising, [and] horticulture” (12). The suggested “birthdate” of American agricultural journalism is April 2, 1819 when John S. Skinner published his periodical \textit{American Farmer} in Baltimore. Demaree writes that Skinner’s periodical was the “first continuous, successful agricultural periodical in the United States” and “served as a model for hundreds of journals that succeeded it” (19). In the midst of the development of the journal, farmers began writing handbooks. Not much has been written on the handbooks’ history, aside from the fact that C.M. Saxton & Co. in New York was the major handbook publisher. Despite the lack of information about handbooks, and as can be seen in my discussion below, these handbooks played a significant role in distributing knowledge among farmers and in educating young farmers, as I now discuss.

Farming’s Influence on Education. One result of the newly circulating print information was the “need for acquiring scientific information upon which could be based a rational technology” that could “be substituted for the current diverse, empirical practices” (Danhof 69). In his 1825 book Nature and Reason Harmonized in the Practice of Husbandry, John Lorain begins his first chapter by stating that “[v]ery erroneous theories have been propagated” resulting in faulty farming methods (1). His words here create a framework for the rest of his book, as he offers his readers narratives of his own trials and errors and even dismisses foreign, time-tested techniques farmers had held on to: “The knowledge we have of that very ancient and numerous nation the Chinese, as well as the very located habits and costumes of this very singular people, is in itself insufficient to teach us . . .” (75). His book captures the call and need for scientific experiments to develop new knowledge meant to be used in/on/with American soil, which reflects some farmers’ thinking of the day.

By the 1860s, the need for this knowledge was strong enough to affect education. John Nicholson anticipated this effect in 1820 in the “Experiments” section of his book The Farmer’s Assistant; Being a Digest of All That Relates to Agriculture and the Conducting of Rural Affairs; Alphabetically Arranged and Adapted for the United States:

> Perhaps it would be well, if some institution were devised, and supported at the expense of the State, which would be so organized as would tend most effectually to produce a due degree of emulation among Farmers, by rewards and honorary distinctions conferred by those who, by their successful experimental efforts and improvements, should render themselves duly entitled to them.³ (92)
Part of Nicholson’s hope was realized in 1837 when Michigan established their state university, specifying that “agriculture was to be an integral part of the curriculum” (Danhof 71). Not much was accomplished, however, much to the dissatisfaction of farmers, and in 1855, the state authorized a new college to be “devoted to agriculture and to be independent of the university” (Danhof 71). The government became more involved in the creation of agricultural universities in 1862 when President Lincoln passed the Morrill Land Grant College Act, which begins with this phrase: “AN ACT Donating Public Lands to the several States and Territories which may provide Colleges for the Benefit of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts [sic].” The first agricultural colleges formed under the act suffered from a lack of trained teachers and “an insufficient base of knowledge,” and critics claimed that the new colleges did not meet the needs of farmers (Hurt 193).

Congress addressed these problems with the then newly formed United States Department of Agriculture (USDA). The USDA and Morrill Act worked together to form “. . . State experiment stations and extension services . . . [that] added [to]

. . . localized research and education . . .” (Baker et al. 415). The USDA added to the scientific and educational areas of the agricultural field in other ways by including research as one of the organization’s “foundation stone” (367) and by including these seven objectives:

(1) [C]ollecting, arranging, and publishing statistical and other useful agricultural information; (2) introducing valuable plants and animals; (3) answering inquiries of farmers regarding agriculture; (4) testing agricultural implements; (5) conducting chemical analyses of soils, grains, fruits, plants, vegetables, and manures; (6) establishing a professorship of botany and entomology; and (7) establishing an agricultural library and museum. (Baker et al. 14)
These objectives were a response to farmers’ needs at the time, mainly to the need for experiments, printed distribution of new farming knowledge, and education. Isaac Newton, the first Commissioner of Agriculture, ensured these objectives would be realized by stressing research and education with the ultimate goal of helping farmers improve their operations (Hurt 190).

Before the USDA assisted in the circulation of knowledge, however, farmers wrote about their own farming methods. This brings me to my next section in which I examine three handbooks written by farmers and connect my observations of the texts with the discussion of agricultural history I have presented above.

CONCLUSION

From examining Drown’s, Allen’s, and Crozier and Henderson’s handbooks in light of nineteenth century agricultural history, I can say that science and education seem to have had a strong influence on how and why these handbooks were written. The authors’ ethos is created by how they align themselves as farmers with science and education either by supporting or by criticizing them. Regardless of their stance, the authors needed to create an ethos to gain an audience, and they did this by including tables of information, illustrations of animals and buildings, reasons for educational reform, and pieces of advice to young farmers in their texts. It would be interesting to see if other farming handbooks of the same century also convey a similar ethos concerning science and education in agriculture. Recovering more handbooks in this way could lead to a better, more complete understanding of farming education, science’s role in farming and education, and perhaps even an understanding of the rhetoric of farming handbooks in the nineteenth century.
1. Danhof includes “Delaware, Maryland, all states north of the Potomac and Ohio rivers, Missouri, and states to its north” when referring to the northern states (11).

2. For the purposes of this paper, “science” is defined as it was in nineteenth century agriculture: conducting experiments and engaging in research.

3. Please note that any direct quotes from the nineteenth century texts are written in their original form, which may contain grammar mistakes according to twenty-first century grammar rules.

MLA Style: Citing and Documenting Sources

This section will show you detailed examples of how to integrate, document, and cite your outside sources in MLA style. Please do not skip the brief section that describes what each item is.

- Use the power of visual comparison. If your citation does not look like the example, try again, or ask an instructor or tutor for help.
- Follow the highlighted text. In each example, there is an in-text citation with a corresponding works cited entry. The yellow highlighted portion is how the in-text citation and the works cited entry are connected.
- The in-text citation is required to correspond with the first item listed in the works cited entry.

  - Types of In-text Citations
  - Examples of In-text Citations & Corresponding Works Cited Entries
MLA Style: Items in Works Cited Entries

Below are all the different items to be included in a works cited entry. Use only items you can find in the source to create a works cited entry.

Authors
- The author is the name of a person or a pseudonym or screenname.
  - No Author: Sometimes no author is listed. If there is no author listed, leave it out of the work cited entry, and begin the citation with the article title.
  - One Author: If there is an author listed, you are required to list this author’s name in the works cited entry and the in-text citation.
  - Two Authors: If there are two authors listed, you are required to list both authors’ names in the works cited entry and the in-text citation.
  - Three or more authors: If there are three or more authors listed, you are required to list only the first author’s name and et al in the works cited entry and the in-text citation.

Title of Article
- This is the title of the article you are using as an outside source in your essay.
- Article titles are always surround by “Quotation Marks.”

Name of Container
- A container is the larger whole in which an article is contained. In other words, it holds or contains the article.
- Containers are always italicized.
- Examples of common containers: books, newspapers, magazines, anthologies, websites, academic journals, and names of library databases.

Other Contributors
- There may be other contributors to a source, such as an editor, translator, illustrator, etc. State the contributor’s role, the word “by” and then the names: edited by Irma Thomas.

Volume & Issue Numbers
- Volume & issue numbers mostly apply to academic journals.
- Abbreviate volume like this: vol. Abbreviate issue numbers like this: no.
- Add the numbers listed after the abbreviation: vol. 112, no. 6,

Page Numbers
- Abbreviate the pages like this: pp. Add the numbers after the abbreviation: pp. 22-24
- For most online articles, there will be no pages number. This is fine. Leave it out.

Publisher
- On print books, you can usually find the company who published the book on the spine.
- If the publisher is the same as the title of the container, which is usually the case with websites and newspaper, you do not have to write the container/publisher again.
- If you cannot find a publisher, leave it out.

URL
- If a source is found online, always include the URL, which is the web address.
- Omit http:// or https:// from the URL when you include it in the works cited entry.

Dates
- Any date you use in MLA style should appear in this format: Day Month Year
- Published: This should be the date the article was published or the date the article was last updated.
- Accessed: This is the most recent date when you accessed the article online. This is used only for online sources.
MLA Style: Types of Works Cited Entries

Please click the types below to see what items to include in the works cited entry for each type, and to see examples of each type, along with what an in-text citation referring to that works cited entry would look like.

Types of Works Cited Entries
1. Article in a Newspaper, a Magazine, or a Website
2. Library Database Journal Article
3. Online Video
4. Film or Documentary
5. Interview
6. Personal Interview
7. Podcast
8. Post to social media
9. Print book
10. An Article in a Print Anthology
11. Two or More Works by the Same Author
12. TV Show
13. Graphic Narrative
14. Song
15. Other Sources

* This is not a complete list. There are more types of sources than this. However, these are the ones most frequently used. See the Additional Resources page at the end of this handbook for help with other citation models.

Do’s
- Do always make sure the works cited entry matches an in-text citation you used in your essay.
- Do ask questions if you are confused about a source. Any English instructor or tutor will likely be able to answer it.
- Do only include items in works cited entries that you can find.

Do not’s
- Do not guess. Use this guide.
- Do not assume page numbers or publication dates. If you cannot see it, it might not be there.
- Do not invent items to include in a works cited entry.

MLA Style: Types of In-text Citations

In-text citations are required any time you use a source in any way while writing your essay. It shows where you used an outside source in your essay, and it shows what source you used. The in-text citation should always match the first item listed in the corresponding works cited entry. Please click the types below to see examples of in-text citations.

Types of In-text Citations

1. One Author in Signal Phrase with Page #
2. One Author in Signal Phrase No Page #
3. One Author in Parentheses No Page #
4. No Author Full Article Title in Signal Phrase
5. No Author Short Version of Title in Parentheses
6. Two Authors in Signal Phrase
7. Two Authors in Parentheses
8. Three or More Authors in Signal Phrase
9. Three or More Authors in Parentheses
10. A Summary that Spans Multiple Pages
11. Source Quoted in Another Source (Indirect Quotation)
12. Two or More Works by the Same Author in Signal Phrase
13. Two or More Works by the Same Author in Parentheses
14. Authors with the Same Last Name
15. Two Different Sources Cited in the Same Sentence

Do’s

- Do always provide an in-text citation.
- Do put the in-text citation either in the signal phrase or in the parentheses after the sentence.
- Do vary the types of signal phrases you use when using direct quotation.
- Do feel free to mimic the examples in this handbook.

Do not’s

- Do not forget to place an in-text citation when using an outside source. Otherwise, it’s plagiarism.
- Do not put the in-text citation in the signal phrase and in the parentheses at the end of the sentence.
- Do not use the website as the in-text citation. This will never be correct.

Fourth paragraph: Contact information (mailing address and e-mail)
This paper explores four published articles that report on results from research conducted on online (Internet) and offline (non-Internet) relationships and their relationship to computer-mediated communication (CMC). The articles, however, vary in their definitions and uses of CMC. Butler and Kraut (2002) suggest that face-to-face (FtF) interactions are more effective than CMC, defined and used as “email,” in creating feelings of closeness or intimacy. Other articles define CMC differently and, therefore, offer different results. This paper examines Cummings, Butler, and Kraut’s (2002) research in relation to three other research articles to suggest that all forms of CMC should be studied in order to fully understand how CMC influences online and offline relationships.

VARYING DEFINITIONS OF ONLINE COMMUNICATION

Varying Definitions of Online Communication and Their Effects on Relationship Research

Numerous studies have been conducted on various facets of Internet relationships, focusing on the levels of intimacy, closeness, different communication modalities, and the frequency of use of computer-mediated communication (CMC). However, contradictory results are suggested within this research because only certain aspects of CMC are investigated, for example, email only. Cummings, Butler, and Kraut (2002) suggest that face-to-face (FtF) interactions are more effective than CMC (read: email) in creating feelings of closeness or intimacy, while other studies suggest the opposite. To understand how both online (Internet) and offline (non-Internet) relationships are affected by CMC, all forms of CMC should be studied. This paper examines Cummings et al.’s research against other CMC research to propose that additional research be conducted to better understand how online communication affects relationships.

Literature Review

In Cummings et al.’s (2002) summary article reviewing three empirical studies on online social relationships, it was found that CMC, especially email, was less effective than FtF contact in creating and maintaining close social relationships. Two of the three reviewed studies focusing on communication in non-Internet and Internet relationships mediated by FtF, phone, or email modalities found that the frequency of each modality’s use was significantly linked to the strength of the particular relationship (Cummings et al., 2002). The strength of the relationship was predicted best by FtF and phone... communication, as participants rated email as an inferior means of maintaining personal to FtF and phone contacts (Cummings et al., 2002).

Cummings et al. (2002) reviewed an additional study conducted in 1999 by the HomeNet project (see Appendix A for more information on the HomeNet project). In this project, Kraut, Mukhopadhyay, Szczypula, Kiesler, and Scherlis (1999) compared the value of using CMC and non-CMC to maintain relationships with partners. They found that participants corresponded less frequently with their Internet partner (5.2 times per month) than with their non-Internet partner (7.2 times per month; Cummings et al., 2002). This difference does not seem significant, as it is only two times less per month.
However, in additional self-report surveys, participants responded feeling more distant, or less intimate, towards their Internet partner than their non-Internet partner. This finding may be attributed to participants’ beliefs that email is an inferior mode of personal relationship communication.

Intimacy is necessary in the creation and maintenance of relationships, as it is defined as the sharing of a person’s innermost being with another person, i.e., selfdisclosure (Hu, Wood, Smith, & Westbrook, 2004). Relationships are facilitated by the reciprocal self-disclosing between partners, regardless of non-CMC or CMC. Cummings et al.’s (2002) reviewed results contradict other studies that research the connection between intimacy and relationships through CMC.

Hu et al. (2004) studied the relationship between the frequency of Instant
Messenger (IM) use and the degree of perceived intimacy among friends. The use of IM instead of email as a CMC modality was studied because IM supports a non-professional environment favoring intimate exchanges (Hu et al., 2004). Their results suggest that a positive relationship exists between the frequency of IM use and intimacy, demonstrating that participants feel closer to their Internet partner as time progresses through this CMC modality.

Similarly, Underwood and Findlay (2004) studied the effect of Internet relationships on primary, specifically non-Internet relationships and the perceived intimacy of both. In this study, self-disclosure, or intimacy, was measured in terms of shared secrets through the discussion of personal problems. Participants reported a significantly higher level of self-disclosure in their Internet relationship as compared to their primary relationship. In contrast, the participants’ primary relationships were reported as highly self-disclosed in the past, but the current level of disclosure was perceived to be lower (Underwood & Findlay, 2004). This result suggests participants turned to the Internet in order to fulfill the need for intimacy in their lives.

In further support of this finding, Tidwell and Walther (2002) hypothesized CMC participants employ deeper self-disclosures than FtF participants in order to overcome the limitations of CMC, e.g., the reliance on nonverbal cues. It was found that CMC partners engaged in more frequent intimate questions and disclosures than FtF partners in order to overcome the barriers of CMC. In their 2002 study, Tidwell and Walther measured the perception of a relationship’s intimacy by the partner of each participant in both the CMC and FtF conditions. The researchers found that the participants’ partners stated their CMC partner was more effective in employing more intimate exchanges than their FtF partner, and both participants and their partners rated their CMC relationship as more intimate than their FtF relationship.

Discussion

In 2002, Cummings et al. stated that the evidence from their research conflicted with other data examining the effectiveness of online social relationships. This statement is supported by the aforementioned discussion of other research. There may be a few possible theoretical explanations for these discrepancies.

Limitations of These Studies

The discrepancies identified may result from a number of limitations found in the materials reviewed by Cummings et al. These limitations can result from technological constraints, demographic factors, or issues of modality. Each of these limitations will be examined in further detail below.

Technological limitations. First, one reviewed study by Cummings et al. (2002) examined only email correspondence for their CMC modality. Therefore, the study is limited to only one mode of communication among other alternatives, e.g., IM as studied by Hu et al. (2004). Because of its many personalized features, IM provides more personal CMC. For example, it is in real time without delay, voice-chat and video features are available for many IM programs, and text boxes can be personalized with the user’s picture, favorite colors and text, and a wide variety of emoticons, e.g., :). These options allow for both an increase in self-expression and the ability to overcompensate for the barriers of CMC through customizable features, as stated in Tidwell and Walther.
(2002). Self-disclosure and intimacy may result from IM’s individualized features, which are not as personalized in email correspondence.

Demographic limitations. In addition to the limitations of email, Cummings et al. (2002) reviewed studies that focused on international bank employees and college students (see Appendix B for demographic information). It is possible the participants’ CMC through email was used primarily for business, professional, and school matters and not for relationship creation or maintenance. In this case, personal self-disclosure and intimacy levels are expected to be lower for non-relationship interactions, as this communication is primarily between boss and employee or student and professor. Intimacy is not required, or even desired, for these professional relationships.

Modality limitations. Instead of professional correspondence, however, Cummings et al.’s (2002) review of the HomeNet project focused on already established relationships and CMC’s effect on relationship maintenance. The HomeNet researchers’ sole dependence on email communication as CMC may have contributed to the lower levels of intimacy and closeness among Internet relationships as compared to non-Internet relationships (as cited in Cummings et al., 2002). The barriers of non-personal communication in email could be a factor in this project, and this could lead to less intimacy among these Internet partners. If alternate modalities of CMC were studied in both already established and professional relationships, perhaps these results would have resembled those of the previously mentioned research.
Conclusions and Future Study

In order to gain a complete understanding of CMC’s true effect on both online and offline relationships, it is necessary to conduct a study that examines all aspects of CMC. This includes, but is not limited to, email, IM, voice-chat, video-chat, online journals and diaries, online social groups with message boards, and chat rooms. The effects on relationships of each modality may be different, and this is demonstrated by the discrepancies in intimacy between email and IM correspondence. As each mode of communication becomes more prevalent in individuals’ lives, it is important to examine the impact of all modes of CMC on online and offline relationship formation, maintenance, and even termination.

The HomeNet Project

Started at Carnegie Mellon University in 1995, the HomeNet research project has involved a number of studies intended to look at home Internet usage. Researchers began this project because the Internet was originally designed as a tool for scientific and corporate use. Home usage of the Internet was an unexpected phenomenon worthy of extended study.

Each of HomeNet’s studies has explored a different facet of home Internet usage, such as chatting, playing games, or reading the news. Within the past few years, the explosion of social networking has also proven to be an area deserving of additional research. Refer to Table A1 for a more detailed description of HomeNet studies.

APA Style: Citing and Documenting Sources

This section will show you detailed examples of how to integrate, document, and cite your outside sources in APA style. Please do not skip the brief section that describes what each item is.

- Use the power of visual comparison. If your citation does not look like the example, try again, or ask an instructor or tutor for help.
- Follow the highlighted text. In each example, there is an in-text citation with a corresponding works cited entry. The yellow highlighted portion is how the in-text citation and the works cited entry are connected.

APA Style: Items in a Reference List

Below are all the different items to be included in a reference list.

Authors
- Use the author’s last name, and use only the initials for first and middle names.
  - One Author: Author’s Last Name, Initials.
  - Two - Seven Authors: Include all names and place an ampersand (&) before the last author in the list: First Author’s Last Name, Initials, Next Author’s Last Name, Initials, & Final Author’s Last Name, Initials.
  - Organization or Government: Begin the reference with the full Organization Name or Government Agency.
  - Unknown Author: If no author is listed, begin with the title. If the author is listed as Anonymous, treat Anonymous as it was the author’s name.

Titles
- Capitalize the first word, proper nouns, proper adjectives, and principal words (the first word or a words after a colon) in titles, as well as subtitles.
- Do not capitalize a, an, the or any prepositions or coordinating conjunctions, unless they are the first word.
- Titles should not have quotation marks.
- Italicize names of periodicals.

Other Contributors
- There may be other contributors to an article, such as an editor or translator. After the title, write in parentheses the person’s (Initials Last Name, Ed. or Trans.)

Volume & Issue Numbers
- For journals and magazines, write the volume and issue number.
- A journal that is volume 33 and issue 4 would look like this: 33(4)
- For newspapers, no volume or issue number is needed.

- For journals and magazine articles, write only the page number. If article is not on consecutive pages, write all page numbers the article covers: 22, 34-39.
- For a newspaper articles, use p. or pp.

Publication Place
- Write the city and an abbreviation of the state. If outside the U.S., write the city and country. Included provinces for Canadian cities.
- If more than one city is shown, use the first.
- Do not included the state if the publisher is a university with the state in its name.

Publisher
- Use an abbreviated form of the publisher’s name but keep Association, Books, and Press in the name.

DOI or URL
- Use the DOI instead of the URL whenever available. Write: doi:
- If using the URL, write: Retrieved from URL

Dates
- Dates are written after the author inside parentheses. If there is not author, dates are written after the title: (Year, Month Day).
- Use the most recent year if more than one date is shown.
- For journals, only write the year.
- For newspapers and magazine, write the year, month or month and day.
- If there is not date available, write: n.d.
APA Style: Types of References

Please click the types below to see what items to include in the reference for each type, and to see examples of each type, along with what an in-text documentation referring to that reference would look like.

Types of References
1. Article in an Online Periodical
2. Article Available through a Database
3. Article from a Non-periodical Website
4. Article or Chapter in a Web Document or an Online Reference Work
5. Electronic Book (eBook)
6. Print Periodicals
7. Print Book
8. Two or More Work from the Same Author
9. Other Sources

* This is not a complete list. There are more types of sources than this. However, these are the ones most frequently used. See the Additional Resources page at the end of this handbook for help with other citation models.

Do’s

- Do always make sure the reference matches the in-text documentation you used in your essay.
- Do ask questions if you are confused about a source. Any English instructor or tutor will likely be able to answer it.
- Do only include items in references that you can find.

Do not’s

- Do not guess. Use this guide.
- Do not assume page numbers or publication dates. If you cannot see it, it might not be there.
- Do not invent items to include in a reference list.

APA Style: Types of In-text Documentation

In-text documentation is required any time you use a source in any way while writing your essay. It shows where you used an outside source in your essay, and it shows what source you used. Please click the types below to see examples of in-text documentation.

Types of In-text Documentation

1. One Author in Signal Phrase
2. One Author in Parentheses
3. Two Authors in Signal Phrase
4. Two Authors in Parentheses
5. Three to Five Authors in Signal Phrase
6. Three to Five Authors in Parentheses
7. Six or More Authors in Signal Phrase
8. Six or More Authors in Parentheses
9. Organization or Government as Author
10. Source Quoted in Another Source (Indirect Quotation)
11. Authors with the Same Last Name
12. Two or More Different Sources Cited in the Same Sentence

Do’s

- Do always provide in-text documentation.
- Do put the in-text documentation either in the signal phrase or in the parentheses after the sentence.
- Do vary the types of signal phrases you use when using direct quotation.
- Do feel free to mimic the examples in this handbook.

Do not’s

- Do not forget to place in-text documentation when using an outside source. Otherwise, it’s plagiarism.
- Do not put the in-text documentation in the signal phrase and in the parentheses at the end of the sentence.
- Do not use the website as the in-text citation. This will usually not be correct.

Grammar Solutions

This section contains brief explanations, examples, and corrections of some grammar errors that occur most often. These types of errors sometimes obscure what the writer is trying to say.

- All students should proofread for these types of errors. If you think you have found one of these errors in your essay and are uncertain or confused, ask an instructor or tutor for help.
- Proofread your essays and assignments closely.

Sentence Fragments

A sentence fragment is a word group that lacks a subject or a verb and does not express a complete thought.

The most common types of sentence fragments are:

- Dependent word fragments

  EXAMPLE: After I stopped reading.

  Corrected: After I stopped reading, I looked up the vocabulary words I didn’t know.

- -ing and to fragments

  EXAMPLE: Trying to find the right dress for the party.

  Corrected: Trying to find the right dress for the party, Susan searched in every store at the mall.

- Added detail fragment

  EXAMPLE: Except from Lola.

  Corrected: Bob has trouble accepting criticism, except from Lola.

- Missing subject fragment

  EXAMPLE: And takes the grocery list with her.

  Corrected: Mary always reads the paper at the coffeehouse on Thursday and takes the grocery list with her to compare it to the grocery store ads.

Ways to Correct Sentence Fragments:

- ♦ Attach the fragment to the sentence that comes after it or to the sentence that comes before it.

  After I stopped drinking coffee, I began sleeping better at night.

- ♦ Add a subject and change the –ing verb to the correct form

  The little girl was trying to be helpful.

- ♦ Change being to the correct form of the verb to be.

  Mel took an aisle seat on the bus. His reason being that he had more legroom.

  Mel took an aisle seat on the bus. His reason was that he had more legroom.

- ♦ Add the subject and verb that the fragment lacks.

  Tony has trouble accepting criticism, except from Lola.

Run-on Sentences

A run-on sentence is two complete thoughts/sentences run together with no clear sign to mark the break between them.

Types of Run-on Sentences

♦ Fused sentence (no punctuation between 2 complete thoughts)

  EXAMPLE: Rosa decided to stop smoking she did not want to die of lung cancer.

♦ Comma splice (comma used incorrectly)

  EXAMPLE: They were learning a new song, they needed to practice more.

Correcting Run-ons – 4 common methods

- Use a period and a capital letter to separate the two complete thoughts.

  CORRECTION: Rosa decided to stop smoking. She did not want to die of lung cancer.

- Use a comma plus one of the FANBOYS (for, and, nor, but, or, yet, so) to connect the two complete thoughts. FANBOYS are coordinating conjunctions.

  CORRECTION: Rosa decided to stop smoking, for she did not want to die of lung cancer.

- Use a semicolon to connect the two complete thoughts.

  CORRECTION: Rosa decided to stop smoking; she did not want to die of lung cancer.

- Use a subordinating conjunction.

  CORRECTION: Because Rosa did not want to die of lung cancer, she stopped smoking.

Correcting Run-ons – 4 common methods

- Use a period and a capital letter to separate the two complete thoughts.

  CORRECTION: They were learning a new song. They needed to practice more.

- Use a comma plus one of the FANBOYS (for, and, nor, but, or, yet, so) to connect the two complete thoughts. FANBOYS are coordinating conjunctions.

  CORRECTION: They were learning a new song, but they needed to practice more.

- Use a semicolon to connect the two complete thoughts.

  CORRECTION: They were learning a new song; they needed to practice more.

- Use a subordinating conjunction.

  CORRECTION: Since they were learning a new song, they needed to practice more.

Subject-Verb Agreement

Subject-verb agreement errors occur when the number of the subject is not the same as the number of the verb.

ERROR: She eat dinner at 6:00 every night.
CORRECTION: She eats dinner at 6:00 every night.

QUICK LIST:
- Each sentence has only 1 “s” for both the subject and the verb. If it is used in the subject, it will not be used in the verb.
  - The students are studying for their test.
  - Judy is working on her essay.
- Cross out the prepositional phrases that come between the subject and the verb to eliminate distractions that make it difficult to determine subject-verb agreement.
  - The books about the new bridge are in the bookstore now.
- Reverse the order of the sentence if the subject appears at the end of the sentence to determine subject-verb agreement.
  - Over the building flies a solitary flag. // A solitary flag flies over the building.

Verb Forms

English verbs can be regular or irregular.

• Regular verbs are consistent in the formation of the simple past and past participle, which both end in –ed.

• Irregular verbs are not consistent in the formation of the simple past and past participle.

Standard Written English requires all verbs to change form to show distinctions in time (tense) and person (subject). For the perfect and progressive tenses, we must use the participle form of the verb.

• For the perfect tense, we use the past participle. For regular verbs, the past participle is the same as the past tense form of the verb: worked.

• For the progressive tense, we use the present participle (-ing): working.

Below is a chart for the regular verb “to work”:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th>Past</th>
<th>Present</th>
<th>Future</th>
<th>Present Perfect</th>
<th>Present Progressive</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I</td>

<td>have worked</td>
<td>are working</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>They</td>
<td>worked</td>
<td>work</td>
<td>will work</td>
<td>have worked</td>
<td>are working</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

When we use the perfect and progressive tenses, the main verb’s participle form always stays the same. Instead of changing the participle form, we change the helping verb to agree with the subject.

• Perfect tense: have + past participle

• Progressive tense: be + present participle

Both “to have” and “to be” are irregular verbs because they have irregular forms in both the past tense and the past participle. For example:

• “to be”
  - Past tense: was
  - Past participle: been

• “to have”
  - Past tense: had
  - Past Participle: had

The forms of “to be” change drastically from present to past to participle, thus making it an irregular verb.

Even though the forms are the same, this is still considered an irregular verb because the form changes from have to had rather than from have to haved.
Below are two charts for the irregular verbs “to be” and “to do”:

“to be”

Note: The present participle of any verb will never be the main verb of the sentence without the helping verb “to be.”

COMMON ERRORS WITH VERB FORMS:

- Incomplete sentence constructions / non-standard forms
  - Error: I writing a story.
    - Correction: I be writing a story.
  - Correction: I am writing a story.
  - Error: He done his homework for today’s class.
  - Correction: He has done his homework for today’s class.
  - Subject-verb agreement
    - Error: He have been upset about the Saints’ loss for weeks now.
    - Correction: He has been upset about the Saints’ loss for weeks now.

Note: For irregular verbs, the past participle will never be the main verb of the sentence without the helping verb “to have.”
Verb Tenses

Verb tenses tell the reader when the verb’s action or state of being takes place. There are twelve active verb tenses: three simple tenses, three perfect tenses, and six progressive tenses.

The simple tenses express basic time relationships. For these tenses, the writer/speaker views the action of the sentence from the point in time when s/he writes the sentence.

The Simple Tenses

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Simple Past</th>
<th>We studied for three hours last night. Janet worked overtime last weekend. David was late to work this morning.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Simple Present</td>
<td>We study for three hours every day. Janet works overtime every Saturday. David is late again.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Simple Future</td>
<td>We will study together this weekend. Janet will work overtime next Tuesday. David will be late tomorrow.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

COMMON ERRORS WITH SIMPLE TENSES:

- Dropped –ed endings
  - Error: Yesterday, we walk through the park for an hour.
  - Correction: Yesterday, we walked through the park for an hour.

- Inconsistent tenses
  - Error: Lacey combs her hair before she brushed her teeth.
  - Correction(s): Lacey combed her hair before she brushed her teeth.

- Non-standard verb forms
  - Error: She be messy.
  - Correction: She is messy.

- Subject-verb agreement errors with the singular third person
  - Error: Darrell love to eat pizza.
  - Correction: Darrell loves to eat pizza.
The perfect tenses express more complex time relationships. Create this verb by adding a form of the verb to have to the past participle of the main verb. (Past participles are usually formed by adding -ed to the verb. See Verb Forms for more about participles.)

The Perfect Tenses

| | |
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Past Perfect</td>
<td>We had studied for two weeks before we took the test.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Janet had worked at AT&amp;T for twenty years.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>David had been late many times before his supervisor fired him.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Present Perfect</td>
<td>We have studied for two weeks already.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Janet has worked at AT&amp;T for twenty years.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>David has been late many times.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Future Perfect</td>

<td>Janet will have worked at AT&amp;T for twenty years next Tuesday.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>If David is late again tomorrow, he will have been late twenty times.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

COMMON ERRORS WITH PERFECT TENSES:

- Subject-verb agreement
  - Error: We has studied for two weeks already.
  - Correction: We have studied for two weeks already.

  - Error: Janet have worked at AT&T for twenty years.
  - Correction: Janet has worked at AT&T for twenty years.

- Verb forms
  - Error: David been late many times.
  - Correction: David has been late many times.

  - Error: We have study for two weeks already.
  - Correction: We have studied for two weeks already.
Progressive tenses correspond to the simple and perfect tenses. A progressive verb shows that the action of the verb is still in progress. Create this form by using to be followed by the present participle form (the -ing form) of the main verb. The tense of the verb to be indicates whether the progressive verb is simple present, simple past, simple future, present perfect, past perfect, or future perfect.

Style and Clarity

This section will help you edit and revise your writing for style and clarity. Style is how something is said – as opposed to content, which is what is said. Clarity is being clear and direct for your audience.

Using Active Voice

A problematic shift to avoid is the unnecessary shift from the active voice to the passive voice. Below is a table to illustrate the difference between active and passive voice.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>ACTIVE VOICE</th>
<th>PASSIVE VOICE</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The subject completes the action.</td>
<td>The object of an active sentence appears as the subject.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The students completed their homework.</td>
<td>The homework was completed by the students.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Note: Active voice is concise.</td>
<td>Note: Passive voice is wordy.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

When to Use Passive Voice

- We do not know the actor—the one who completes the action—in the sentence.
  - Example: My car was broken into last night.
- The actor is less important than the receiver of the action is.
  - Example: My brother was hit by a car.

COMMON ERRORS IN VOICE

- Error: I lost my purse, so a new one was purchased.
  - Correction: I lost my purse, so I purchased a new one.
- Error: I made lasagna two nights ago, and the leftovers were eaten by my brother.
  - Correction: I made lasagna two nights ago, and my brother ate the leftovers.

Active voice is preferred, so be sure to proofread your own writing to eliminate unnecessary instances of the passive voice. As you proofread, look out for voice shifts within the same sentence.
Transitions

Transitions help to create a sense of structure in writing because they illustrate relationships between ideas. Choose transitions for their logic, and do not overuse them. A few well-placed transitions will go a long way.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>To add ideas</th>
<th>also, and, and then, too, plus, in addition, furthermore, moreover, similarly, again, on top of that, another, first, second, third…</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>To organize ideas chronologically</td>
<td>now, then, before, after, afterwards, earlier, henceforth, thereafter, previously, later, immediately, temporarily, soon, next, in a few days, meanwhile, gradually, suddenly, finally</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To compare ideas</td>
<td>in the same way, similarly, just like, just as, likewise, in fact, in like manner, indeed so, also, furthermore</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To contrast ideas</td>
<td>but, still, however, on the other hand, on the contrary, yet, nevertheless, despite, in spite of, even though, in contrast, although, whereas, anyhow, conversely, instead, notwithstanding</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To illustrate causes and effects</td>
<td>because, since, so, consequently, as a result, therefore, then, accordingly, hence, thus, for this reason, for this purpose, so that this may happen</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To emphasize</td>
<td>indeed, in fact, surely, necessarily, certainly, without any doubt, in any event, truly, again, most important, above all</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To provide examples</td>
<td>to be specific, as proof, to illustrate, in fact, indeed, namely</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To restate</td>
<td>that is, in other words</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To concede a point</td>
<td>it is true, granted, admittedly, to be sure</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To show alternatives</td>
<td>on the one hand . . . on the other hand</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To summarize</td>
<td>in summary, as I have shown, as has been stated, in other words, in brief, to sum up, in short</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Parallelism

Parallelism is a grammatical form that creates balance between ideas using single words, phrases, and clauses.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>COORDINATING &amp; CORRELATIVE CONJUNCTIONS</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Coordinating conjunctions connect ideas of equal importance. Whether used to connect words, phrases, or clauses, the use of coordinating conjunctions often requires parallel grammatical form.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Correlative conjunctions come in pairs and require that the grammatical structure that follows the first half of the pair is parallel with the grammatical structure that follows the second half of the pair.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>for, and, nor, but, or, yet, so (FANBOYS)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>either/or</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>neither/nor</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>not only/but also</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>both/and</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>whether/or</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

COMMON ERRORS WITH PARALLEL FORMS

- Errors in parallelism can occur in a series or list of nouns, in phrases, or clauses.
  - Error: Sarah cleaned the kitchen, bathroom and she swept the garage.
  - Correction: Sarah cleaned the kitchen, bathroom, and garage.
  - Error: Athletes who practice regularly build strength, endurance, and they are more confident.
  - Correction: Athletes who practice regularly build strength, endurance, and confidence.
  - Error: Watching football, listening to music, and time with friends are Darrell’s favorite activities outside of work.
  - Correction: Watching football, listening to music, and spending time with friends are Darrell’s favorite activities outside of work.
  - Error: He told me either to take the streetcar or ride my bike.
  - Correction: He told me either to take the streetcar or to ride my bike.
  - Error: Darrell was not only inefficient but also was unfriendly.
  - Correction: Darrell was not only inefficient but also unfriendly.
  - Error: It is more fun to exercise outside than working out at a gym.
  - Correction: It is more fun to exercise outside than to work out at a gym.
    Exercising outside is more fun than working out at a gym.
Sentence Variety and Structures for Argument

Repetitive sentence structures can make an interesting idea sound boring or a strong argument sound weak. Know the four sentence types and use them to control the pace and rhythm of your writing and strengthen the rhetoric effect of an argument.

The Simple Sentence

A sentence that has only one independent clause*:

- Subject + verb.
- Subject + verb + verb.
- Subject + subject + verb.
- Subject + subject + verb + verb.

*A clause is simply a group of words having a subject and a verb. A clause may be independent, expressing a complete thought and able to stand alone, or dependent, not able to stand on its own.

Examples:
- David was late to the movie last night.
- I prefer steak to pizza.
- David and John missed the bus for school.

Strategies for Argument:
One problem with [opposing view] is __________.
Activists insist ________. Still, ________ would [make the problem worse/violate a basic human right].
__________ must be taken into consideration.
A common concern about this issue is __________.

Note: You can add a prepositional phrase to the opening or closing of a simple sentence. This can also help to create sentence variety among simple sentences.

The Compound Sentence

Two independent clauses joined by a comma and a coordinating conjunction (for, and, nor, but, or, yet, so):

- Subject + verb, for + subject + verb.
- Subject + verb, and + subject + verb.
- Subject + verb, nor + subject + verb.
- Subject + verb, but + subject + verb.
- Subject + verb, or + subject + verb.
- Subject + verb, yet + subject + verb.
- Subject + verb, so + subject + verb.

In compound sentences, use a comma before the coordinating conjunction.

Examples:
- David was late, for he missed the bus.
- I would prefer steak, but I will eat pizza.
- David missed the bus, so he was late.

Strategies for Argument:
Some proponents of ________ agree with ________, but ________.
This subject has become controversial, so we must look carefully at ________.
I agree with those who support ________, yet there are alternative views to consider.
The Complex Sentence

Two clauses joined with a subordinating conjunction (as, because, although, since, before, when, once, if, even if, whatever, whenever, during, until, unless, wherever, whether, while, as if, even though, that, which, who)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Subject + verb + because + subject + verb.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Because + subject + verb, subject + verb.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Comma use in complex sentences can be confusing, so here are examples of the rule:

- When the dependent sentence goes first, use a comma.
- Do not use a comma when the dependent sentence goes last.

Examples:

- Because David missed the bus, he was late.
- David was late because he missed the bus.
- Even though I prefer steak, I like pizza.
- I like pizza even though I prefer steak.

Strategies for Argument:

- Although most would agree with ________, it does not mean ________.
- Opponents disagree with this argument because ________.
- If this solution seems too expensive and time-consuming, then consider ________.
- While some support ________, I support ________.

The Compound Complex Sentence

Two or more coordinate independent clauses and one or more dependent clauses:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Subject + Verb + S. Conjunction + Subject + Verb.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>S. Conjunction + Subject + Verb, C. Conjunction + Subject + Verb.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Examples:

- Because David missed the bus, he was late for class, so he failed the exam.
- Even though I would prefer steak, I will eat pizza, but I want to try that new place.

Strategies for Argument:

- Research shows that most people favor ________, but this does not make ________ right or true.
- As some critics have claimed, ________ does not hold true, and they are right.
- Because ________, I support ________, and here is why: ________, ________, and ________.
- This issue divides our community, yet some people still argue ________ because ________.
Comma Usage

Here are six common comma rules:

1. Put a comma before one of the FANBOYS (for, and, nor, but, or, yet, so) when they connect two independent clauses.

   EXAMPLE: The neighbors recently bought a minivan, and they take short trips every weekend.

2. Put a comma between three or more items in a series.

   EXAMPLE: Students in literature classes are reading novels, stories, poems, and plays.

3. Put a comma after an introductory expression or subordinate clause.

   EXAMPLES:
   - Finally, he was able to get through to his insurance company.
   - When he showed up, he looked tired.
   - After he left school, he went home.
   - If she goes to Jazzfest, she will have fun.
   - Once upon a time, I used a comma in a sentence.
   - As we walked out the house, she sneezed.

4. Put commas around the name of a person directly addressed.

   EXAMPLE: Did you know, Danielle, that you left your backpack at the library?

5. Put commas around words like however or therefore when they interrupt or begin a sentence.

   EXAMPLES:
   - I know, of course, that I have missed the deadline.
   - However, he had an unusually large hat, and I was pleased.

6. Put commas around additional information. (Pro-tip: If you can omit the phrase from the sentence and the sentence remains grammatically correct, you should surround the phrase with commas.)

   EXAMPLE: Maxine Taylor, who organized the fundraiser, will introduce the committee.
Concision

If you can say it in five words, why use ten? To improve sentence style, eliminate wordiness. Indirect and mixed sentence constructions, redundancies, unintentional or unnecessary repetition, and wordy phrases can all lead to wordy sentences. Practice reducing the number of words in a sentence without changing its meaning.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Indirect Constructions</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Indirect constructions occur when a writer overuses the verb ‘to be.’ Use stronger verbs to make these sentences more concise.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Examples:
- There are many nutritionists who claim intermittent fasting works.
- John’s family was involved in planning his surprise birthday party.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Concise Alternatives:</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Many nutritionists claim intermittent fasting works.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>John’s family planned his surprise birthday party.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Mixed Constructions</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Mixed constructions occur when two or more types of sentence constructions collide in a sentence.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Example:
- The reason we did not go to the party last night was because it rained.

“The reason was” and “because” are two different sentence constructions with the same meaning and should not be used together.

NOTE: “The reason was” is grammatically correct, but it is also creates a wordy sentence. We can simply use “because.”

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Concise Alternatives:</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>We did not go to the part last night because it rained.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>It rained last night, so we did not go to the party.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Redundancies

Redundancies occur when a writer unnecessarily repeats the same idea.

Examples:

She wore a dress that was purple in color.

John quickly sped downhill on his bicycle.

Concise Alternatives:

She wore a dress that was purple.

Make the sentence more concise by moving the modifier purple in front of the noun that it modifies: She wore a purple dress.

John sped downhill on his bicycle.

Repetition

Repetition occurs when a writer repeats the same word(s).

Example:

Good students know they need to be the kind of students who attend classes regularly and study regularly.

Concise Alternative:

Good students know they need to attend classes and study regularly.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Wordy</th>
<th>Concise</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>As a matter of fact</td>
<td>In fact</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>In today’s world</td>
<td>Currently</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Due to the fact that</td>
<td>Because</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>In spite of the fact that</td>
<td>Although</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>In the event that</td>
<td>If</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

These phrases can be cut completely:

- I think
- I believe
- I feel
- In my opinion
- It seems that
- One must admit*
Tone

Tone refers to a speaker’s or writer’s attitude toward his or her subject and audience. As readers, we may identify a tone generally as angry, humorous, formal, informal, or serious, but tones can often be more specific and complex. For instance, a humorous tone can be more specifically sarcastic. An angry tone can be more specifically indignant. Choose a tone that will evoke the reaction that you want your readers to have to your message.

Imagine a customer responding to a grocery store clerk who is having an off day. Note how the different tones each reveal a different attitude:

Indignant: Never, in thirty years of shopping at this grocery store, have I ever experienced such incompetence. Where did you learn to count change?! You should be embarrassed.

Humble: I’m sorry to bother you, but I gave you a $20, right? Would you mind double-checking? I mean, I’ve had a long day, so maybe I miscounted…

Sarcastic: Wow. Great service here today. No wonder the checkout line is so long.

Sympathetic: I know you are under a lot of pressure to help all of these customers. I get flustered too when I am stressed, so I can understand why you gave me the wrong change. I really appreciate you taking your time to correct this.
